CURRICULUM INNOVATIONS AND DEVELOPMENT: *GRADUATE PROGRAM IN ASIAN STUDIES AT DUKE

- 2004-2005: Asia Pacific Studies Institute Designed and Implemented MA Program. Serves non-traditional and returning students, mid-career professionals, as well as JD/MA students. Thesis alternative combines an extended personal intellectual statement focusing on a primary question and debate, with a rigorous survey of the field through annotated bibliography of 100-150 items and research readings that brings together an inter-disciplinary perspective on a primary problem. The end-product provides a customized reference text aiding the student after graduation in their professional endeavors.
- 2004: Developed New MA Core Course for APSI: “Critical Introduction to Asian Studies.” Required course for Masters students in the program and introductory course for Ph. D. students in East Asian Studies.

- 2002: Designed and Implemented MA Degree Curriculum for the Asia Pacific Studies Institute. Co-designed (with Leo Ching) new interdisciplinary Master's program, the only such program in the country. Annual number of 135-140 applicants
- 2002: Director, Duke Summer Institute: “Globalization, Women and Development”. Faculty Institutes for Curriculum Development: Summer Institute at Duke funded by external grant from US Department of Education and Center for International Studies, introducing Gender and Development Studies to HBCU. Developed core syllabus. Faculty Institute had 35 faculty attendees from all over the country selected from 158 applicants for participation in the Institute.
